INTERDISCIPLINARY METHODS FOR TEXTUAL ANALYSIS
From Ancient to Medieval Texts

1-3 September 2026

Verona
Seminario Vescovile
Via Seminario, 8

models

The International Training School is designed to provide students, early-career researchers, professionals, and interested participants with advanced training in innovative methodologies applied to the study of texts. The term 'text' is defined here in its broadest sense, encompassing inscriptions on a wide range of materials as well as late medieval and humanistic manuscripts.

The programme places method at its core, conceived as a mediating framework between technological innovation and the materiality of the text. The lectures will offer a critical overview of the most recent digital technologies applied to textual studies, highlighting their potential, limitations, and interpretative implications in fields such as epigraphy, philology, palaeography, and historical linguistics.

practices

Alongside the theoretical seminars, the Training School includes practical workshops designed to foster the direct acquisition of operational skills. Participants will take part in practical sessions held at different venues: workshops on fragmentology and image processing as well as on digital survey methods applied to inscribed supports at the Seminario Vescovile and the Museo Maffeiano, then a final session on imaging techniques and 2D/3D applications to the Biblioteca Capitolare heritage.

Through the integration of lectures and hands-on activities, the Training School seeks to demonstrate how advanced technologies can implement and strengthen textual scholarship, fostering a conscious dialogue between traditional approaches and cutting-edge digital tools.
